[illegible] Associated Press Reporter Says is Hippolyte

NOT SO BLACK AS PAINTED

[illegible] He Thinks How He Has Been Wronged. The Maintenance of Authority Required Severity, but That is All

[illegible]

J. B. Terres, consul [illegible] ... the present [illegible] for alarm that an outbreak [illegible]

... is absolutely no foundation for any ... that General Hippolyte or his government ... is stated in the outrageous manner ... sented in United States journals during ... President Hippolyte he says is sincere in his desire to do right but he will not [tolerate] the slightest attempt to weaken his authority. If he had been assassinated on ... the city would have been in flames ... in half an hour. Probably thousands would have lost their lives and looting ... have been rampant.

According to people here who ought to be qualified to judge the personal and political character of Hippolyte has been painted far too black. The maniacal outbreaks attributed to him from time to time have no place in his nature, according to those who best know him.

In a diplomatic interview not long ago a person who was present says that tears came into the eyes of Hippolyte when the conversation touched on the crimes attributed to him. At the same interview Hippolyte said: "I ... tried to preserve peace in my unhappy country."

Assurance is given by diplomats, capital and business men generally that until the affair of May 28 the present government had been extraordinarily patient. It has granted full liberty of the press, and full ... generally. These concessions were ... scurrilous criticisms and misrepresentations of the president's acts and those of his ministers. Contempt and scorn Hippolyte bore with equanimity for some time, but there began to be indications of defiance. He gave warning that he proposed to take severe measures to uphold his authority. Nobody affected to believe it until it was too late. Now that Hippolyte is on the alert the malcontents are proving that they can be very quiet.

The people in Hayti from all accounts are coming to tire of endless revolutions and useless bloodshed.

The publication of Mr John D. Metger's pamphlet "The American Question in Hayti" has aroused considerable attention. The charges made against Admiral Gherardi, Mr. Mr. Clyde and Mr. Hughes are considered very grave. Mr. Metger is a citizen of New York and has been for some years German consul at Gonaives. Mr. Metger, ... now ... assured the Associated Press correspondent that he had made no charges without proof. He thought a mean and outrageous method had been resorted to by our government in its dealings with the Haytian government on the question of Mole St. Nicholas.

The unbroken tranquility now prevails ... still true that there is an undercurrent of unrest and uncertainty to the future. ... Hippolyte is complacently waiting ... outbreak occurs he is confident he can ... it.

From the Seat of War

NEW YORK, Aug 25.—A special to The Herald from Valparaiso says: Neither of the armies now confronting each other along the shore of Valparaiso bay seems disposed to renew hostilities just at present, and beyond some desultory and unimportant skirmishing there was no fighting yesterday. So far as can be learned the commanding officers of the two armies are watching each other closely and are maneuvering for position.

General Canto, it is generally believed by the people here familiar with the ... has realized the fact that it is well nigh impossible to capture Valparaiso by direct attack along the lines he apparently had in view when he commenced the attack at Vina del Mar Sunday and was upon ... It is altogether probable, therefore, he will change his plans of attack by making a ... back into the country, in order to get a position from which he would have a chance to make a direct attack on the city, exposing his troops more than is absolutely necessary to the firing of heavy guns of the forts, which in some measure offsets Balmaceda's superiority of numbers.

It is generally conceded to be a wary as well as a determined fighter, and his plan of operations it may be days before the armies again join battle.

... Balmaceda and his officers are ... in the art of war and do not propose to allow the insurgents to take a trick unawares. ... He is strengthening his army ... as possible, and there is an impression that his idea is if possible to cut off the line of retreat to his ships before he ... and then he hopes to gave him a ... blow which will wipe him out of existence and thus end the rebellion.

... appears to be about the situation, and ... the other of the commanders ... the position for which he is ... probable that there will be no fighting.

It was quiet yesterday. All business ... was suspended and the people here ... talk about but the probabilities of a battle.

This makes fifty-two bodies discovered in the ruins. Twenty-one bodies were at the morgue ... sixteen of which were unidentified.

Late in the afternoon Mayor Grant's private secretary stated that as soon as the mayor returned to the city he would appoint a committee of well known citizens to take charge of all subscription for the relief of the sufferers.

At 5:15 this evening a fearfully mangled body was recovered from the east side of the ruins. It was body number forty-three. One-half of the head was completely crushed and nothing was found which might lead to identification.

At 8:30 this evening another bruised form was found. As the coroner stepped up to view it as it was being raised by the firemen the head dropped off and disappeared in the black depths below. The body was that of a young girl about 17 years old. At this time three mangled forms were in sight. These three, and also another one were taken out by 10 o'clock, making forty-eight victims recovered. The last four bodies recovered were those of men.

BASE BALL

Western Association.

DENVER-KANSAS CITY

DENVER, Aug 24.—Inability to hit Sowders was the cause of Denver's downfall to-day. They only got two men past third base. Kansas City's fielding was "out of sight," and Denver also did well. The score:

Kansas City	3	0	1	0	0	1	0	0	x	—5

Two base hits—Hoover. Stolen bases—Beard, Pickett and Sowders. First base on balls—Off Gilliland 3, Sowders 1. Hit by pitcher—Manning. Struck out—By Gilliland 4, Sowders 3. Wild pitches—Gilliland. Time—1:25. Umpire—Gaffney.

SIOUX CITY-OMAHA.

SIOUX CITY, Aug 25.—Sioux City-Omaha game called at first inning on account of rain. Score, 4 to 0 in favor of Sioux City.

National League.

PITTSBURG-BOSTON

PITTSBURG, Aug 25.—Six of the nine hits made by Boston were made off Galvin's delivery, five of them in the first inning. He retired in favor of Silver King, who proved more effective. Clarkson was doing his prettiest for Boston. After the first the battle was ... fully between pitchers, King striking out eleven of the men who faced him, while Clarkson was ably second. Score: Boston 7, Pittsburg 1.

CLEVELAND-PHILADELPHIA.

CLEVELAND, Aug 25.—Philadelphia had things pretty much their own way in this afternoon's game with the Clevelands until the fifth inning, when the home team "began to find" Gleason, and kept on "finding him, winning the game by a veritable whirlwind of hits. Young Shearon pitched for the "Dumplings" and did well after the first inning. Score, Cleveland 7; Philadelphia 4.

CINCINNATI-NEW YORK.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 25.—Bobb Barr was knocked out of the box in the first inning this afternoon and young Arthur Clarkson relieved him. This change did not bother the Porkers at all. Richardson was doing, or rather trying to do, Glasscock's work at short, and as usual with him when he is an "off day" he was away off. Buck Ewing played second base and played it well. Only in two innings, the first and last, did the Giants hit Mullane's delivery with anything like vigor. ... was in his element and poked fun at the Giants in and out of season, much to the amusement of the spectators. In the first inning eleven men faced Barr before the home team was retired. Cincinnati 12, New York 4.

CHICAGO-BROOKLYN.

CHICAGO, Aug 25. Pitcher Hemming who enjoys the distinction of having struck out Harry Stovey of the Boston team, nine times in succession, stepped into the box this afternoon to "do up" the Chicagos. If the Colts don't need some medicine to "overcome that tired feeling" they are more than human, for their legs must be stiff from the sprinting they indulged in at the expense of the Brooklyn man. Once in a while a Colt would get tired and wait for his base on balls, so that he might rest himself while walking to his base. Once in a while he would strike out when Hemming would allow it. Fifty-eight times were men at bat on Anson's side. The story is continued in the score: Chicago 28, Brooklyn 5.

AN AGREEMENT POSTPONED

WASHINGTON, Aug 25.—The League and Association arbitrators who have been in session at the Arlington hotel since ... o'clock this evening endeavoring to amicably adjust the differences between the two organizations ended their meeting at 12:30 o'clock to-night. An agreement was about to be made to the effect that all players now signed with clubs should remain with them. At this juncture Louis Kramer, of the American Association who had been informed by good authority that M Kelly, now of the Boston Association team was about to jump his contract and go to the Boston League club, presented the information to the meeting and said that unless the Association received the assurance of the League that Kelly would be held to his contract, the conference would come to an end. The League men would not give the desired assurance and the meeting ended.

The Association men informed the League representatives that they would meet the latter at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning if they wished to discuss the matter further.

Several telegrams have been received here from Boston confirming Kelly's intention to jump to the League.

Hurricane in England.

LONDON, Aug 25.—A fearful hurricane is raging along the south coast of England and much fear is felt for the safety of the British and French fleets, there being at present no communication between the vessels and the shore. The French sailors on shore have been obliged to remain for the night and sixty British officers are detained on board the Marengo, the flagship of Admiral Gervais. It ... rained in ... since 8 o'clock to-night, ... it is impossible to discern any signals.

GREAT APPLAUSE

A FAVORED HAPPY PEOPLE

... Senator ... the president took luncheon. Those ... Secretary Proctor, ex-Governor Stewart, ex-Governor Ormsby, Gen Wells, Hon A F Walker, ... B B Smalley, ... Woodbury, C W Woodhouse, F W Halford, Gen J C McCullagh, Col F C Smith, Howard Cal..., Gen ... Peck, G F C Benedict, ex-Governor Barstow, C H ... and Mayor Hazelton.

Following the luncheon the president and party were driven to the library building facing the public square, where a stand had been erected in front of which a great throng had gathered. Mayor Hazelton introduced the president, who spoke as follows:

MR. MAYOR AND FELLOW CITIZENS: I am not a little intimidated as I face so unexpectedly a vast concourse of the citizens of this great state. I say great though your territorial extent does not place you among the larger states ... that gave occasion for an early and resolute expression of that love of liberty which has always pervaded your people ... a population that has never bowed the knee to the arrogance of power or to the blandishments of wealth and has, through all the history of the state maintained the inspiration of its early appeals for love of personal independence.

I rejoice to be present to-day at the home of one of your distinguished public servants with whom it was my good fortune for a time to be associated in the discharge of public duties.

I am glad to see here, at his home, the respect and honor in which George F Edmunds is deservedly held by the people of Vermont. [Applause.] Having for six years witnessed the value of his services as a legislator in the senate of the United States, I share with you the regret that this country is no longer to enjoy those services, though it is a source of great gratification to you, as it is to me, to know that in his love and loyalty to the union of states, there will be no call for his wise council and help that will not find ready response in the walks of private life which he has chosen to resume. [Applause.]

My fellow-citizens, it is true, as your mayor has said, happily true, that we not infrequently and with ease lift ourselves above all the conditions of party strife and stand in the clear, inspiring, instimulating sunshine as American patriots. [Applause.] We are conspicuously a people who give their allegiance to institutions and not to men. [Applause.] It were a happy thing for others of our sister republics on this hemisphere if they could follow this great example. Our people are not slow to appreciate public services; they are not reluctant to acknowledge transcendent genius, but they give their loyalty as citizens to institutions and not to parties or to men. [Applause.]

This was happily shown in our great rebellion when party divisions that seemed to lift barriers between us like those mountain peaks, were obliterated in a moment by that love of the constitution and the flag which pervades all our people. A love that made the people of all those great states as one, that sent from Vermont and Massachusetts, as from Indiana, those stalwart and devoted sons who offered, and many of them gave, their lives for the perpetuity of the union and the honor of the flag.

Let us pursue our lines of division. It is characteristic of a free people. It is essential to that mental agitation and unrest out of which the highest and best is evolved, but let us never forget that the fundamental thought of our government is the rule of the majority, lawfully expressed at pure and clean elections, and that when thus expressed, obedience of the laws enacted by those chosen to make our laws, and support of the executive officers chosen are not less the duty of the minority than of the majority. [Applause.]

They are ours, our servants, our representatives, to whom we yield the respect of office and that measure of personal regard to which their lives may entitle them. [Applause.]

We are this year a most favored and happy people. Drought has blasted the crops of many of the nations of the world. Most of the people of Europe are short of food, and God has this year mercifully to us, mercifully to them, provided that our storehouses burst with plenty. We have a great surplus of breadstuffs and there is not a bushel of wheat, corn, rye or oats that will not find a ready market this year. Happy are we in this great prosperity, happy that again out of our abundance the lack of other peoples may be supplied. Let us be careful that our heads are not turned by too much prosperity. It has been out of hardness, out of struggles, out of self-denial, out of that thrift and economy which was an incident of United States soil that the best things in New England have come, [applause] and while thankful to God for a season that diffuses its blessings as this sweet sunshine is diffused into all our homes, let us remember that it is not after all riches that exalt the nation. It is pure, clean, high, intellectual, moral and God fearing citizenship that forms our glory and surety of a nation. Let me thank you again for the friendliness of your manifestations and for the opportunity to stand for a few minutes in this most beautiful city. [Applause.] You have the advantage of many of our municipalities. You have not only the beauty of these groves and gardens and pleasant streets and lovely homes, but from these hill tops you have laid under contribution fifty miles in either direction to beautify Burlington. [Applause.]

I thank you and part with you with regret that my stay cannot be longer and my intercourse with you more personal and informal. [Applause.]

At the conclusion of the speech the president was escorted to his carriage and driven to the landing of the Champlain Boat club, where Seward Webb's beautiful steam yacht Elfrida lay at anchor. There was a large crowd on the gallery of the boat house to see the president embark. Dr. Webb stepped into the tender and awaited the president to follow him. When on the cushioned seats of the boat, he took the tiller and gave the command to shove off. As the boat glided away from the boathouse the crowd on the gallery cheered again. At the same moment the little brass cannon in the bow of the Elfrida began the presidential salute of twenty-one guns. Commander Webb gave the signal to start the Elfrida at just 3 o'clock, the time fixed for his ... Stowe.

Mr F C Smith introduced the president. The president's speech was of the same tenor as that which he delivered in Burlington and evoked loud and continuous applause at its conclusion.

At the conclusion Secretary Proctor was called for. He spoke briefly. The president then returned to ex-Governor Smith's residence where he will spend the night. He will leave for Montpelier at ... o'clock to-morrow morning, stopping en route at Richmond and Waterbury. At Montpelier he will be received by Governor Page and by the legislature in joint session.

President Moffatt Resigns.

DENVER, Aug 25.—A dispatch was received from New York to-day stating that D H Moffatt, of the Denver and Rio Grande, had tendered his resignation to the board of directors. A United Press reporter called on Mr Moffatt this afternoon. When asked concerning the truth of the dispatch Mr Moffatt said that it was true and gave as his reasons that not being in accord with the board of directors and English stockholders he had thought it for the best interest of all concerned that he resign. It is understood that Mr Moffatt did not approve of the placing a comptroller in charge of the financial department of the road.

REASON OF THE RESIGNATION.

DENVER, Aug 25.—It is announced to-day that on Thursday last President D H Moffat, of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad forwarded his resignation to the board of directors at New York. No action can be taken upon it until the first meeting of the board in September. To an Associated Press representative Mr Moffat this evening said that this action was due to the fact that he is not in accord with the recently adopted policy of attempting to manage the details of the business from New York, and therefore he could not seemingly assent to the new order of things by longer remaining president of the company.

The Rio Grande system embraces almost 1600 miles of rail. For about four years Mr Moffat has had charge of the road and in that time he has changed the gauge of almost the entire system from narrow to broad, put on first-class rolling stock, extended branches and made the Rio Grande generally an ideal railroad. The news of his resignation which is just spreading over the city is taken as a calamity to the state.

New York Stock Market.

NEW YORK, Aug 25.—The demand for American securities from London imparted a strong tone to this market at the opening to-day and prices opening here were from ½ to ¾ per cent higher. The market remained firm throughout the morning, and further advancing for buying for the home account. The principal trading was in St Paul, Louisville and Nashville, Northern Pacific preferred, Atchison, Reading and a few others. The advance ranged from ¼ to 1½ per cent. The market was more active for 12 o'clock, while prices were strong throughout. Some of the list showed indications of being bid up by cliques that formed to advance their prices. The Vanderbilts were the leading features, and it was reported that some of the largest houses in the street had received orders to buy Lake Shore and Big Four. Lake Shore was up 2 points at one time. The closing figures were generally within a fraction of the best of the day. The advance ranged from ¼ to 2½ per cent. The sales for the day amounted to 200,000 shares.

The Times on Reciprocity.

LONDON, Aug 25.—The Times to-day publishes a three-column article upon the projected Inter-Continental railway, which, when completed will link the South and Central American republics with each other and with the United States.

In discussing these plans The Times expresses the opinion that James G. Blaine, the United States secretary of state is a man of grandiose ideas, and if, as it seems quite possible, he is the next president there will be some chance of realizing the scheme.

Continuing The Times says that the project is to join the markets of North and South America, but there is no place for a general commercial system even in the relations between the several republics. The railroad when completed would have to compete with the great waterways on either side of the continent.

From Buenos Ayres to New York and from Valparaiso to San Francisco the existing means of transit are simpler and cheaper than they could ever be made on a railroad. It is obvious that the scheme equally has political as well as commercial ends in view. To join the North and South American republics, even though the first outward sign of union will be nothing but an iron rail with the supreme center of the Republican government at Washington, is a conception of captivating magnitude.

Many people of practical opinion The Times says, think that the scheme will never be realized. The jaws demanded by the United States for guaranteeing the bonds of the ... would be in commercial and political ... which the other republics could not grant. The United States is regarded as the rival of England and, as the ... of the ... half of the continent were developed by English capital, there is ... an important party which will regard any step toward ... commercial and political ... as a step away from an old ... friend.

$70 ... Appropriated [illegible] Water Works Bonds

A SCANDAL THAT FAILED

... Mr ... ked ... water ... asked ... of the ... and Alderman Davis ... stated that an ordinance would be presented for the issue of $70,000 water works bonds.

Alderman ... said that complaints had reached ... the ... in Colorado avenue ... had ... The mayor stated that the ... to investigate ... the W ... from the latest ... had been ... and it had been agreed that a large ... would be built and other ... that would protect ... property there.

The ... stated that he had been notified by the ... that the hose house on ... will have to be removed as the ... proposed to erect a larger building on the property. The matter was referred to the ... grounds committee.

Alderman Bartlett had been down to the Tejon street underground and found a few ... The mayor said that Belcher had a contract for the digging and that the work would proceed very soon.

Alderman Finegan wanted to know what had become of the resolution to compel the rapid transit people to issue transfers in the city limits. Mayor Sprague reported what the committee in charge of the matter had learned, giving the road's position in the case. He said they would probably stand a suit before renewing them. Mr Finegan then moved that the Rapid Transit company be compelled to issue transfers or vacate its franchise. Alderman Davis said he would second the motion and Alderman Finegan thanked him, declaring it the first he had had in three months. A vote on the motion was taken, all voting aye but Leach and Roby.

Wm Scott asked for the privilege of the floor and prepared to spring a sensation. Mr Scott said that a little meeting of the taxpayers had been held and he had been appointed to investigate whether the city officers were feeling stock at the city's expense. He had been to the city barn and found there two mules that do not belong to the city, and the horses of the city street commissioner and city sewer inspector, all being fed. Mayor Sprague attempted to stop the speaker declaring that such matters should come before the committee, but the council insisted that the matter should be discussed.

Alderman Rouse of the street committee arose to explain. He said that the two mules were being fed for their hire. The owner drew them in and ... $2 per day and gave the use of the team for their board. The alderman thought that pretty good economy. There are over one hundred miles of streets and alleys in the city to be cared for and Mr Clark is one of the hardest worked men in the city. He could not do his work without a horse and the committee thought it nothing more than fair to feed his horse, especially as they were unable to raise his salary as was intended last spring. The sewer inspector keeps his horse there but pays $12 per month for its care. The man employed to care for the stables puts in his time also in building ditch boxes and other like work.

Alderman Finegan raised a laugh by remarking that if the city board was cheap he had two horses he would like to board. By a motion the committee was instructed to continue to care for the horses.

The clerk read the ordinance to issue water bonds in the sum of $70,000. The bonds are payable in fifteen years and are to bear a rate of six per cent interest payable semi-annually. The rules were suspended and the ordinance adopted. No reason was advanced why the bonds are to be issued, but it is understood to be for the purpose of piping from the settler to a point above Palmer's ...

Mayor Sprague and Mr Thos Palsgrove had decided to accept the $300 voted by the council for securing options and would receipt in full.

Alderman Finegan called attention to a resolution offered in the council by Mayor Sprague, when an alderman last year, which required city officers to give a preference to married men when employing workmen, all other things being equal. He declared that this rule had been frequently violated.

It became evident that there has been some trouble among Water Superintendent Frost's men on account of being discharged, but the exact situation did not appear. He gave something of an explanation regarding the inefficiency of the men discharged, etc. One of the discharged men was allowed to speak, but he and Mr Frost got into an altercation. Several members made the motion to adjourn. Alderman Finegan wanted to know if Mr. Frost was above the city council. Mayor Sprague declared that such matters should only be heard in committee, and amid some confusion adjourned the meeting.

Iron Springs guests danced the merry hours away last night, the cool, crisp air adding materially to their comfort and to that of the many guests from other hotels. The halls and ante rooms were heated by steam while the great porches outside bathed in tender starlight had their attraction for the more youthful and warm-blooded dancers as a promenade. At 11 p.m. the Iron Springs Hotel hop for the last week in August became a thing of the past, but will be pleasantly remembered by all who participated in it.

Commander George W. Personally a man of excellent presence with the true military carriage of one trained by discipline, and accustomed to command, he bears his honors modestly and is distinctly companionable. The family expressed their appreciation of beautiful Manitou, comparing it with certain Swiss towns in the Engadine, and rather to the advantage of our Rocky Mountain Saratoga. The commander said the department covered the Atlantic and Pacific ..., the lakes and large rivers, employing many men and seventy-six boats and ... in caring for the 1000 light houses and 1800 post lights scattered over the coasts, lakes and rivers of the United States. Elsewhere we publish two more communications on the "Reign of Terror" question. There is no doubt that it would be an excellent thing if no burglaries or hold-ups ever occurred, and such a delightful state of affairs would be well worth striving for, but none of the proposed remedies seem adequate to this end. As our correspondent suggests, many people object to shooting burglars in the house and others do not like to do it on the streets even with the endorsement of judge, lawyer and minister. As for vigilance committees the only circumstances in which they have been of service were where a community was overrun by the open lawlessness of well known offenders. Neither a committee of citizens, nor an increased police force would make much headway in running "suspicious" characters out of the town. The police are actively engaged in keeping vagrants who come under the law on the move, but so long as a man can secure board and lodging for cash or credit, no amount of "suspicion" warrants his being sent out of town. Eight policemen are a small number for a city of nearly 14,000 people, but we do not see but that they perform the usual police duties with reasonable zeal and diligence. If this city has fewer policemen in proportion than many others, it needs less. The proof that the crimes so far committed were by "criminals of opportunity" and not professionals is afforded by the details and the results. In the Heming case, for instance, professionals would hardly have attacked and killed the motorman when, as every one knows, it is the conductor who has the cash, and then left without securing any money. It is not the way of professional burglars to ransack a house and, leaving plate and jewelry, take only comparatively small amounts of cash. Professional burglars do not prowl around until a door or window is found open and take what lies nearest at hand. In fact it seems probable that the recent crimes, which have been grossly exaggerated especially in some out-of-town newspapers, have been of a class which could not have been prevented if a policeman stood on each block all night, and a large part of them have been due to the neglect of such precautions against sneak-thieves, porch-climbers and petty rascals of all kinds, as are commonly observed in all cities where extreme good order and usual absence of crime have not lulled people to over-security.

The progress of Colorado as an agricultural state is marked by the increasing number of fairs held in various cities for the display of farm products. Not many years ago nothing of the kind existed, but now there are many of the counties with regularly organized societies, to say nothing of the Peach Days, Watermelon Days and Potato Days of the various towns. Perhaps there is not one of all these celebrations which is more clearly a mark of progress than the annual exhibit of the State Horticultural society which is to be held at Grand Junction on September 15-18. It is certainly remarkable that a wild mountain valley on one of the most recently opened Indian reservations should so soon become a successful competitor in fruit-raising with the most favored regions of other states. Fortunately the Grand Junction people have already been able to demonstrate the truth of their claims. They not only say they can raise fruit but they have the peaches, pears, apples, grapes, apricots and other varieties to show to all inquirers. And so this year when the people of the Grand valley claim that they will outdo all previous efforts, there is good reason to believe that they will do so. It will be noticed that this is the state exhibit, and many other sections will be represented. In some of these, as Canon City and Boulder, the orchards and vineyards have been longer planted and they have already gained an enviable reputation as first producers. Our own county in the past has not been without laurels in this line, and there is material on the trees at the time for a very creditable exhibit. Indeed throughout the state the season has been an exceptionally favorable one for all kinds of fruit, and the visitor to Grand Junction may be sure of seeing a display well worth going many miles to behold, and one worthy of a state which already claims a high rank as a fruit producer.

WESTERN BREVITIES.

Farm products in the country about Longmont are showing the effects of repeated rains, and much loss is feared.

The Cheyenne Gun club will hold its second annual tournament from Sept. 1st to 4th, inclusive, on the grounds at Cheyenne.

The new 110-foot addition to the pavilion being erected in Grand Junction for the purpose of the state horticultural display next month was blown down by wind on Monday night.

Wants Protection.

To the Editor of THE GAZETTE:

I noticed with pleasure the letter signed "Lover of Law and Order" in your to-day's issue. It seems to me high time for our citizens to demand something in way of protection for their taxes and from their small but inefficient police force. The argument advanced in your editorial that householders should protect themselves and that no jury has ever convicted a man for killing a burglar seems, for a so-called civilized community, a strange one. Many people have a strong feeling against killing a human being, burglar or not, and would rather lose all their possessions than have a life on their consciences. Besides this every man risks his own life in the protection of his property, the chances being always in favor of the midnight intruder, and that life is invariably worth more to the world than the miserable scamp who takes it. There are also many houses in this community without male protection, and although in exceptional cases women know how to handle firearms, the vast majority have never even had an unloaded weapon in their hands. The question has been seriously discussed of late by some of our best citizens to take the law in their own hands and form a "Vigilance Committee" to clean the city of tramps and low idlers of every description, and it could easily be done by a little energetic work. However, should it come to such a pass, and if our authorities do not bestir themselves it will, how will the outside world, the class we are advertising for, view the situation. Will invalids, tourists and others flock to our town to live and invest here if law and order are mere by-words? Low railroad rates will offer little temptation if at the end of the journey burglars, tramps, etc., collect forcibly the full fare.

I believe there is a law against carrying "concealed weapons," but I doubt if there be a citizen, whether judge, lawyer or minister, who would not indorse, if not openly advise at the present time the carrying of "the means of defense." Let any one go out at night, even before 10 o'clock, in any part of the city, and notice how nearly every one walks in the middle of the street instead of using the sidewalks, and what a wide berth pedestrians allow one another. There is great politeness, but little familiarity. Some of our well known townsmen should air their views on this important subject and the council put on their "thinking caps" to devise some means for making it a little uncomfortable, if not "very hot" for the burglar, hold-up and murder fraternity before our town gets the bad name it now so well deserves.

Yours truly, VIGILANCE.

What a Citizen Thinks.

DEAR SIR.—I cannot refrain from adding my endorsement to the letter of "Lover of Order and Law" in your paper of this morning. That there is a condition of things existing in this city of grave significance to residents and reflecting uncreditably upon our municipal authorities, is an unquestionable fact. It has become a habit with me of late to look first in your columns for the record of the past night's burglaries. I do not always find it, but its recurrence is too unpleasantly frequent. I have not kept account of the number of repeated attempts, successful and unsuccessful, to break into and rob the houses and stores of residents of this and neighboring cities. But to my knowledge, not one of the perpetrators has been brought to justice. You say in your editorial that "most of the thieving done here is not by professionals." How do you know? It strikes me that the work is done in an ultra-professional and business-like manner. The men that are doing it are not journeymen, they know what they are about, particularly after they have completed their job and undertake to cover their tracks. The very fact that our city is an orderly one, with no criminal resorts and localities where "pals" can hide each other, makes the matter worse that none are detected. It is not necessary to maintain "a sentinel on each block." But until this "reign of terror" is overcome, there should be an increased force of at least an officer to every four blocks. Thieves do not stay long in one place if they find that the authorities are "onto" them and after them. But they are liable to prolong their visit indefinitely if they are let alone. I am a resident of the North End, and I have never yet at any time of day or night, seen a policeman north of Cache La Poudre street. A few nights since I was awakened at 12 o'clock to find a man prowling around my house, on the same night I was awakened again at exactly 3 o'clock to find the same man or another in the middle of the street in front. It is a situation I don't like and for one want to see it rectified. The murder which you say was committed outside the city limits, was considerably nearer my house than the postoffice is. While I do not desire to cast any undeserved reflections on the police force, I think an expression of opinion in cases of this kind ought to bring about more or less reformation. CITIZEN.

The Association Situation.

The Association situation is a peculiar one. To drop Louisville and Columbus are impossible feats unless the cities surrender their franchises. With a rebellion in progress they are of little value, but with the protection vouchsafed by the national agreement both are great towns. When the time for action comes Louisville, Washington and Columbus will be found firmly advocating a return to the paths of peace—the only road to common prosperity. There are too many cities without baseball now to crowd Columbus and Louisville into the graveyard. The south is a great baseball morgue, but the game died there of high salary complaint. Detroit and Indianapolis are the only northern cities of note that have no representation in any baseball organization. The City of Straits would not enthuse over the International and Northwestern, and Indianapolis looked coldly upon the Interstate. After a city has had "the best" it is hard work to please cranks with a minor league article.

There is a gentleman in the Association upon whom it will be well to keep an eye—Captain Comiskey. When Captain Duffy's Bostonese started west they had the pennant mortgaged, but St. Louis, despite disheartening and unexpected defeats at Columbus, has drawn dangerously near their opponents from the Bay State. St. Louis is famous for fireworks finishes, and the Browns will come very near holding a position right behind the band wagon in October. They will wind up at home. The championship bee is still buzzing in Baltimore's bonnet, and in truth the Orioles are making a new record this year. Generally while their spring plumage is unruffled and fair to look upon they make a fine spurt until along about the Fourth of July. Then somebody clips their wings and they fall into the second division. Of course, no one expects the Baltimores to win out, but if they should the Monumental City would go wild.

Richardson's Illness.

Danny Richardson has a peculiar disease similar to the one which frightened Tiernan almost to death about two years ago. Dan will probably get over it just the same as Tiernan has. Richardson, while not the most robust of players, is well put together, and has considerable muscular activity. Still he is afraid of that dreaded scourge consumption. There is probably no more consumption in Richardson than there is in old Anson. Two years ago Michael Tiernan was a victim to the same superstition, and a visit to his room was interesting. Michael had all the sides of his room arranged with big shelves, on which hundreds of bottles of various medicines and concoctions rested. He used to take enough medicine every day to depopulate an ordinary hospital. He was always sick, or rather thought he was. One day Mutrie went up to Tiernan's room and with his big ebony stick he made seven or eight rapid passes along these shelves. Every bottle in the room was smashed to pieces. Tiernan has never been sick since. He can hit a ball probably as hard as any man in the world, but if he had been left to himself he would probably have scared himself into consumption and then to the grave.

A Good Advertiser Gone.

In the death of P. T. Barnum the advertising world lost a stanch friend and advocate. The great showman never lost an opportunity to preach the possibilities of printers' ink. Although not a typical advertiser—his field lying outside of ordinary paths—he was an enterprising and energetic one, and he has always been quoted—as he deserved to be—as one of the shining examples of success attained through judicious advertising.—Printers' Ink.

THE ELECTRICAL WORLD.

A BILLION DOLLAR BUSINESS THAT IS OF RECENT ORIGIN.

It Is Divided as Follows: The Telegraph, the Telephone, the Electric Light, Electric Motors and Miscellaneous—Some Interesting Information.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Aug 20.—Half a century ago, as all the world knows, there was no money whatever invested in electrical industries, for the excellent reason that there were no electrical industries to invest in. Science had not yet utilized the subtle fluid—had not even begun to learn, excepting in the most general way, what its properties were. Ten years ago the general public looked with amazement at the enormous figures which represented the investments made in the telegraphic service which had become an old story. Hundreds of companies, all over the world, had been established with big or little capital, and in the United States alone these investments footed up somewhere near a hundred millions of dollars. The bulk of this was controlled then, as it is now, by a monster company, which had swallowed up rivals and predecessors until it possessed, as it still does, almost a monopoly of the telegraphing business of the country. The growth of the Western Union company was unprecedented, and its accumulation of capital was good ground for the wonder and admiration of the people.

That was ten years ago. Since then marvels have occurred that cast the growth of the Western Union far in the shade. Telegraphing, wonderful as it is, was only the first in a series of miracles that are steadily revolutionizing the industries of civilization. The various uses of electricity, new as they are and crude and unfinished as the development still is in some ways, have attracted capital in the United States alone to the amount of about $1,000,000,000.

The statement seems incredible, but a little examination is enough to show its truth. The newly discovered force is used not only to send signals over wires, but spoken messages as well. It is used to operate machinery in place of steam. It propels cars. It furnishes the most brilliant and almost the cheapest artificial light known. It is even used in a few places to supply heat. And in each of those uses it calls for the manufacture of a great quantity of special tools and appliances, so that an enormous business has grown up in this branch of manufacture.

In New York city alone there are about 400 companies and firms wholly engaged in this business. The capital they have invested varies from a few hundred dollars to a round million, which is the estimated investment of the largest one. So rapid has been the development of the applied science of electricity that this business of furnishing electrical supplies has itself been divided into branches, and rich companies devote themselves in many instances to the production of a few specialties alone out of the long list of articles that are demanded.

The main divisions of electrical industries are, as indicated, five in number. They are the telegraph, the telephone, light, power and "the general trade," so called, or the manufacture of supplies and appliances. It is by considering these separately and estimating their growth that the tremendous statement above, concerning a billion of dollars, can be justified.

The capital of the Western Union Telegraph company, as is well known, exceeds one hundred millions. When, to this figure is added the sum of capital invested in other lines, including small local companies and cables that are owned in part in the United States, it is not difficult to realize that the total is something like one hundred and fifty millions of dollars.

In connection with this subject of telegraphing a curious story is told, which, although it concerns only a small fraction of the money mentioned, is well worth repetition. A few years ago two or three inventors, Edison among others, experimented largely in what is known as induction telegraphy—that is, the reception and transmission of messages without contact with a wire. It was found entirely practicable to take messages or send them from an instrument in a moving car, and two companies were formed, based on different patents. The patents were found to conflict, and the two companies were consolidated by way of compromise and began business with bright prospects. They constructed a plant on a certain well known railroad, and performed work that was highly satisfactory, when they met with a sudden check. One of the most enthusiastic stockholders was very wealthy and bought up a very large majority of the stock. He chanced to be a spiritualist, and just when the prospects were most flattering he announced that he had received a communication from the spirits forbidding him to allow any more work to be done by the company. Accordingly the business came to a sudden standstill, and the other stockholders have not yet been able to do anything at all.

The second branch to be developed was the telephone. Everybody will remember the bitter struggle which went on for years over the validity of the governing patents and the final victory of the Bell company, which gave it a monopoly of the business in all the United States. To get a correct estimate of the actual investments made in telephones is difficult. The quotations of Bell telephone stock, if any should be sold publicly, would not be a fair indication, since the present value is of course far in excess of the first cost, and more than that it by no means represents the investments made since. All over the country companies big and little are constantly forming to build lines. More than a million messages a day are sent over the wires—many more than a million now, for that report is more than a year old. There are about 200,000 miles of telephone wire in actual use and more than 300,000 instruments connected.

It is certain that there is more than a hundred millions invested in this branch alone and probably two hundred millions would be nearer the mark.

In electric lighting the business is still newer, and the figures are perhaps not as large. Still in August last the president of the National Electric Light association reported that the investments amounted to $118,000,000. This represented, he said, the operation of 127,411 arc lights and 1,590,000 incandescent lights.

That was a year ago, and the figures were official and presumably correct. In a single month since that time it is recorded that there were thirty-seven new companies incorporated in the United States which proposed to operate electric lights, either as their sole business or in connection with electric railroads, the development of water power or some kindred enterprise. The total amount of the capitalization of these thirty-seven companies was over $4,000,000. Probably a considerable amount of this is not paid in, but allowing a fair proportion for failures it is reasonable to assume the total investment in electric lighting at $150,000,000. If that is not the figure today it will be before the end of the year.

A still newer branch than the lighting is the development of power by electricity, applied to locomotive or to stationary engines, and if the statistics were as readily attainable as in reference to the three branches already considered, it would be easy to show that the investment in this is fully as large as in any of the others, if not much larger.

As a matter of course the investments in railroads are proportionately heavy, and with the rapid multiplication of electric railroads all over the country the figures are growing faster in this direction than in any other. No recent statement has been made of the number of miles of electric railroads in operation, and the last one I have seen was dated Jan. 1, 1890. There were then over 400 miles in working order. Certainly there are several times as many now.

But even the investment represented in these miles of road is far less at the present time than in the innumerable plants established for the driving of stationary machinery.

Of course it will not do as yet to speak of electricity as superseding steam, even in the running of railroads, for as it has been found impossible to economically generate the electric current directly from the elements, steam and water power are used for this purpose, and in 95 per cent. of all the electrical plants in the country steam is really the prime power. In but 5 per cent. of the electrical plants in the country is the current generated by water power. The advantage in the use of electric motors over steam lies in the greater economy of the former.

Especially is this true in the case of small factories and light machinery requiring small power. In such cases unless steam can be drawn from a central plant it is expensive, the small steam engines being disproportionate in cost to large ones. It is not so with electrical engines, or at least it is not true to the same extent, and thousands upon thousands of small engines are today in use, while the demand for them is growing so rapidly that it taxes the resources of the manufacturers to turn out a sufficient supply.

The very moderate estimate of $100,000,000 as the sum of the investment in these power machines or engines brings the total, as I have figured it, thus far up to $600,000,000. And lest any one should accuse me of exaggeration, I will quote from the speech of Mayor Davenport, of Kansas City, before the National Electric Light association on Jan 1, 1890. He declared that then, in the four branches I have described, the total investment was $600,000,000. This nearly two years ago, and a statement made from official statistics. I have greatly underestimated the present figures—not exaggerated.

And there is still the "general trade" to consider. It is seriously questionable if this does not employ as much capital as all the others combined. To produce all the materials and supplies needed probably costs fully as much if not more in the way of invested capital, as the great operating companies employ.

For it must be remembered that the widest use of electricity has not been touched on. This is what electricians term the domestic branch. Not only is electricity widely used in isolated plants for the production of light—which has been considered—but electric bells, burglar alarms and similar contrivances are in hundreds of thousands of counting rooms, business buildings and private residences. Their use is increasing as rapidly as that of all the other inventions based on the new science. Indeed, it seems almost as if the business moved with the swiftness that the fluid does. Nothing has happened to check it thus far, and it seems certain that it will expand into still more marvelous proportions in the near future.

Surely a hundred millions a year increase in a new business is one of the greatest wonders even of this century of scientific miracles.

Something for "Home Folks."

WHILE you are living in beautiful Colorado, enjoying its climate, drinking in its magnificent scenery, and reaping the benefits of life in a model city like Colorado Springs, does it never occur to you that the friends LEFT AT HOME do not half understand what you have and they are missing. Letters filled with descriptions are interesting, but they do not convey the impressions of the life of the people as does a good READABLE PAPER. One dollar and fifty cents will buy the Weekly Gazette mailed to any postoffice in the United States. Why not send it as a complement to your letters?

The Weekly Gazette is SPECIALLY PREPARED for persons living outside of Colorado Springs, and who cannot receive the Daily every morning. It has as large a circulation as any weekly in the county, is handsome typographically, and will make an acceptable present. Subscribe for the WEEKLY GAZETTE! Read the Weekly Gazette! Advertise in the Weekly Gazette; you will find it profitable.

WHY I AM A LUTHERAN

A Sermon by Rev A R Howbert D D

The Rev A. R. Howbert D D, pastor of the Colorado Springs Evangelical Lutheran church on Sunday morning delivered an able and exhaustive discourse on the above subject in the Lutheran church to a good congregation. Dr. Howbert prefaced his remarks with an apology for having been unable to speak upon the distinctive doctrines of the Evangelical Lutheran church in Colorado Springs before the present time on account of absence from the city.

The reverend gentleman said: I have selected the 48th psalm, 12th and 13th verses as the basis of my remarks this morning: "Walk about Zion, and go round about her: tell the towers thereof. Mark ye well her bulwarks, consider her palaces; that ye may tell it to the generation following."

The church was called into being by Almighty God, and from Him received the germ of her existence. Like the soul of man she is endowed with immortality. She will always exist, though sometimes her glory may be tarnished and her beauty may be marred. Yet her appearance at least at times will be "as clear as the sun, as fair as the moon and as terrible as an army with banners." By the church in its most extended sense we mean all true believers united in Christ Jesus. These true believers are found among all denominations of Christians. An individual church is simply a collection of such believers. We are apt to confound denomination with the church. There is a wide difference. The church is a divine institution whilst a denomination is a mere human arrangement that is otherwise an important one situated, as we are, in this imperfect world. We are here, however, to-day not to criticize or find fault with other denominations, but we ask you to go around with us and take an impartial view of our Lutheran Zion. "Tell the towers thereof, and mark ye well her bulwarks. Consider her palaces that ye may tell it to the generation following."

We think that the church we represent has many strong towers, and we think that she has many impregnable bulwarks in her doctrines, and in her principles, and we flatter ourselves that she has many beautiful palaces for her children. We deem it very proper that we should present, on this occasion, our distinctive views of doctrines, polity, and forms of worship. We are often asked "What do you Lutherans believe, anyhow? What doctrines do you hold?" It sometimes seems very strange to us, indeed incredible, that there should be so much ignorance in the community concerning the Lutheran church, the mother of Protestantism. Many have no doubt been misled by certain independent European churches in our large cities for example—who call themselves Lutherans or, more commonly, Protestant churches. They are not Lutheran in any sense, but are made up generally of free thinkers, who do not hold to the doctrines of the Lutheran church at all. They are more Unitarian in their views. Thank God that this ignorance concerning the Evangelical Lutheran church is vanishing before the onward march of the church.

But that our remarks may assume a more tangible form, we first call your attention to the general character of the Evangelical Lutheran church. Let us look at the general character of the church. She is the oldest and by far the largest Protestant church in the world. She numbers at least fifty millions of communicants. She is equal in her numerical strength to all other Protestant churches put together. We do not claim, however, that the Lutheran church "is the church." Not at all, but she is, as her name indicates, one of the Evangelical denominations of the land. We do claim for her, and properly too, that she is not a sect. Her organization was not the result of schism or of sectarian bigotry. Luther and his coadjutators had no intention of forming a separate organization when they began the reformation. Their purpose was simply to protest against the errors that had crept into the doctrines and into the practice of the Romish church. The Reformers, for a time at least, cherished the vain hope that, by the help of God, they would be able to reform that church, but this was a mistaken notion, and because of their fidelity to the work of God they were cut off from communion of the Romish church. The Church of Rome was the aggressor in this case, as you all very readily see. Being excommunicated from the church the Reformers very naturally and readily organized themselves into Protestant organizations, and in the readjustment of these congregations everything in doctrine and practice was eliminated that was contrary to the word of God. There was almost, therefore, an entire revolution in doctrine and in practice. They called themselves the Evangelical or Gospel church. But Luther's enemies in derision persisted in calling the Protestant churches Lutheran, so gradually the name was adopted, perhaps for convenience and that the great historic facts of the reformation under Luther might be better preserved by the church. Another historic fact, for which every American ought to thank God, is that out of the grand principles enunciated by Luther evolved the liberal government of the United States. Had there been no reformation under Luther there would have been no republican form of government in this land but doubtless a form of government like that of Spain, and Romish bishops, and even pope, doubtless would have exercised great influence in moulding the destinies of this country. Possibly our condition to-day would be much like that of Mexico. Had there been no reformation in the church during the sixteenth century there would have been no Puritan Fathers to land upon Plymouth Rock, there would have been no pious Salzburgers and French Huguenots to settle in the south, there would have been no God-fearing Quakers or persecuted Presbyterians and Episcopalians to settle in America, and there would have been no sturdy Lutherans and Reformers to settle in the middle states of this country. The fact is the first settlers of this country being oppressed in the old country brought with them the liberal principles promulgated by Luther and his associates. We claim that many of our ablest statesmen such as Webster, Clay and others, that the liberal government of the United States are simply the culmination of the Reformation under Luther. We [illegible] all of you examine this subject carefully for yourselves, and I think you will agree with us that we are indebted to the Reformation of the sixteenth century, and indirectly to the Lutheran church, for the free government in these United States.

We are not here to-day to eulogize the character of Martin Luther, and yet I may be allowed to say that he was in my opinion, the grandest man that has lived since the days of the Apostles. He was a remarkable man, remarkably fitted for the work he was called to do. He was a man of wonderful faith. He did not only believe in God. He held God. He was a man of profound learning. Knowledge seems to have come to him intuitively. As a moral hero, he has no peer. For illustrations of his heroism see him at the beginning of the reformation with a long roll of parchment, hammer and nails in hand, as he approaches the church door, and in the face of an excited multitude, he nails his ninety-five theses to the church door. See him again as he is excommunicated by the pope of Rome. He takes the pope's bull in one hand, walks to the public square, kindles a fire and publicly burns the edict of his excommunication. See him again as he is summoned to appear before that august diet at Worms. His friends protest against his going as they had learned of a plot laid to [illegible] him. "No," he says, "I will go if there are as many devils in Worms as there are tiles on the houses." He did go. Singly and alone he stands before that august body. It was a sublime sight! He is asked to recant. He replies "Convince me out of the Scriptures that I am in error, and I will cheerfully recant." Then, with a Latin copy of the Bible in his hand, he lifts his eyes heavenward and utters the memorable words "Here stay Ich, Ich kan nicht anders, Gott hilfe mein." "Here I stand, God help me. I can do nothing else. God aid help him." This is in brief an illustration of the character of Luther the founder of the Lutheran church and we trust that his impress is still seen and felt upon the ministry of the church and upon the laity.

Again we remark that there are many features in the character of the Lutheran church which we admire. First we admire her conservative position in polity and in forms of worship. She avoids extremes. She takes a medium position. She takes a position between extremes and says, "The middle is the best position or the best road." Avoiding extremes she rests upon a happy medium and she is emphatically correct. All I think will see the advantage of her position. Again she holds to the parity of the ministry. All ministers in the Lutheran church are equal and have the same authority. One is not allowed to rule over God's heritage with impunity. All are bishops or overseers. And again she holds to the parity of the laity. All laymen all laywomen in the church, are equal. All are one in Christ. "One is not above another in authority. One is not higher than the other. So high, no low, no rich, no poor, no bond. All are free in Christ Jesus.

Again she teaches and we say it is an impregnable position that religion is a practical system, and hence she teaches that people are to practice religion not to get religion, and we have just as much religion as we practice. If we practice little we have little. It is just like cultivating the soil. As a man sows so shall he reap.

Again, she teaches that every man and every woman can demonstrate for themselves and to themselves, the truth of the Christian religion by pursuing the practical method laid down by our Divine master. If any man will do His will he shall know the doctrine, whether it be of God or of man, and were this grand principle carried out in the life of each individually, there would be no skepticism, and there could be no infidelity. If you would examine, you would see that our church has an impregnable position here.

She teaches also the duty of private interpretation or private interpretation of the Scriptures. All are to interpret the Scriptures for themselves. For the Master says to each individually "Search the Scriptures." One of the fundamental principles taught by Luther, and held by the church, is that every man and every woman is a priest unto God himself and herself.

Again, she teaches justification by faith alone. Luther said "By these articles the church must stand or fall."

She teaches the universal brotherhood of man,—"that God out of one blood created all nations to dwell on the face of the earth."

But more specifically in regard to the distinctive doctrines held by the Lutheran church. In doctrines, the Evangelical Lutheran church is eminently Scriptural. First, she teaches that the Holy Scriptures are our only rule of faith and practice, and that the Apostles creed is a correct summary of the doctrines of the Bible. "We believe in God the Father, Almighty, maker of heaven and earth, and in Jesus Christ, His only begotten Son, our Lord, who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate, was dead and buried, descended into the place of departed spirits, but the third day did rise again and ascended on high, where he sitteth at the right hand of God the Father, whence he shall come again to judge the quick and the dead. We believe in the Holy Ghost, in the holy Christian church, in the communion of saints, in the forgiveness of sins, in the resurrection of the body and in life everlasting."

We also receive the Augsburg confession, and regard the confession as embodying substantially a correct summary of the teachings of the Scriptures, but let it be remembered we put the Bible above all confessions. We only receive confessions as they can be clearly and distinctly defended by the Bible. We, in our doctrines, make Christ the Lord very prominent, and I am glad of this, my dear friends. Christ is the sum and substance of our system of doctrines. "He is all and in all." Like a wheel, he is the center and the circumference. We make Christ the standpoint from which we view all doctrines. Many make their confessions the standpoint, and in this they greatly err. Therein is the great trouble with those who make the sovereignty of God the great standpoint. I think we have an impregnable position on this score also.

We also make prominent repentance and faith. Again the church teaches that every member of the church may preach, exhort and expound the Scriptures on his own responsibility. She holds the ministry called of God alone are allowed to administer the sacraments, and ordain other ministers to serve the church.

She teaches that the true and invisible church consists of all true believers found in the different denominations of Christians. She also holds that there are two sacraments in the church, the Baptism and the Lord's Supper. Baptism she regards as the door, and is the sealing covenant that God has made with man, the door into the church, and the water used in baptism is the symbol of regeneration. We do not hold the doctrine of baptismal regeneration. We do not regard mode as having any significance whatever. The Lord's supper is regarded by us a most important means of grace. We regard it as more than a commemorative ordinance, and whilst we do not believe in transubstantiation, consubstantiation, impanation or subpanation, or the corporeal eating of the body of Christ, or the drinking of his blood, we believe in a sacramental or spiritual presence of Christ in the administration of the Lord's Supper that we do not understand, and, therefore, we will not attempt to explain it. It is sufficient for us to know that we receive Christ our Lord in this sacrament, "and he becomes ours and we become his."

Our church holds that the Lord's Supper is in no sense a denominational institution. Therefore, no denomination has the right on any pretence whatever to fence the Lord's table. Our church teaches that the sacraments of the church, and the ordinances of God's house, cannot be made dependent for their validity on a specific mode of administration or observance. She regards mode in religion as a mere accident, of no value, having no moral qualities.

She also receives infant membership as an important doctrine of the church. Personally, I regret that I am compelled, on account of what has been said derogatory of infant membership, to argue that question somewhat in this discourse. It is not infant baptism, but it is infant membership we will make the subject of discussion for a few moments. As a church, we teach that God never had but one church on earth in all the ages. All true believers in the different dispensation constituted this one church. The real character of the church never has been, and never will be, changed, as we said in our introductory remarks. The church is endowed with immortality, like the soul of man, and must ever exist. The forms, the ceremonies, the sacraments pertaining to the church under different dispensations have the same relation to the church that a scaffolding sustains to the building. In the text the church is compared to a building. The scaffolding serves a very important purpose, but it is not the building. The scaffolding can be taken down when it has served its purpose, and the building remains unimpaired, and so the paraphernalia, forms and ceremonies under the different dispensations may be taken away and the church remains intact. During all the dispensations of the church infant membership was an important element of the church. That I think, must be a clear proposition. During the Adamic period infant membership existed by Divine authority. The covenant with Noah includes infants. And in the covenant made with Abraham we have the emphatic language of the Almighty himself recorded in Genesis xvii. We give you the precise language of this covenant, to which we invite your special attention. Hear what the Almighty says, "I will establish My covenant between Me and thee, and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant," that is a covenant never to be broken, a covenant always to exist. And again, God says, explaining the character and nature of this covenant, "This is My covenant, which ye shall keep between Me and you [illegible] He that is eight days old shall be [illegible] among you. Remember that [illegible] dispensation. Baptism [illegible] circumcision whilst the [illegible] over was changed [illegible] baptism the [illegible] that existed [illegible] This covenant was [illegible] through Moses [illegible] xxix chapter "This [illegible] through the different [illegible] [illegible] have had this beautiful illustration of infant dedication. And it is worthy of remark here to-day every legal document throughout the civilized world owes its legality to this event. Anno Domini means in the year of our Lord, i. e. the date is taken from the circumcision of Christ when the name of Christ was put upon the church book. Do you know that my dear friends when you write the year 1891 meaning so many years from the date of Christ's circumcision? He continued as a faithful member of the church, rendering obedience to all the requirements of the church, and when he was 30 years old, according to the law, read Luke iii, 21-23, he became eligible to the office of the ministry. He did what the law required under the old dispensation. He applied to John for baptism, or more properly for ordination, that He might enter the ministry. John forbade Him, but He said to John, "It becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." And on another occasion, "I came not to destroy the law, but to fulfil the law," i. e. to obey the law, to obey the rites of the church. The rites of the law of the church required that every teacher or priest must be set apart, being washed or sprinkled with clean water. Read, if you please, Numbers xliii, 23-35. Lev viii, 6. This will give you an entire history of the matter. The custom was to take the one set apart to a running stream, and there throw the water over the head. There is no intimation anywhere that the body was put under the water. Christ "was made a priest after the order of Melchizedek," and now, after having spent forty days in the wilderness, he preaches and teaches in the Jewish synagogues, and in the Temple, and no objection is made for the term of three years. But, after his resurrection, having completed the work he came to do, just before His ascension, by divine authority, He changes the order of things in the church. He has a right to do this. We are not left in the dark in regard to the change of the dispensation from the Abrahamic to the Christian. We have very plainly presented to us the laws which so many do not seem to apprehend or perceive the teachings of the Bible upon this point. The old Passover was changed to the Lord's Supper, the mode of reception into the church was changed to simple baptism. We are not in the dark on this subject. You will see that, I think, very clearly in the xxviii. chapter and 19th verse of the Gospel of St. Matthew, which contains the great and grand proclamation, a proclamation ending the Abrahamic covenant; a proclamation beginning the new order of things: "All power is given to me in heaven and upon earth: go ye make disciples of all nations baptizing them in the name of the Father, of the Son and of the Holy Ghost." Mark the language. Mark what the Master says. He says He has all power, i. e., He has the ability and the authority to make the change. And now let us see what this proclamation really means. What does it comprehend? Who does it say are to be received into the new dispensation? Does it say that adult men and adult women shall be discipled and taught. Does he say that? No, he says all nations shall be received. All nations! At least three-fifths of the human family, and of the nations of the earth, are children. You see that the proclamation instituting the new dispensation includes children, as they are an important element of every nation. Logically, we have come to the conclusion that to fulfill the requirements of the proclamation, that children are to be received into the church, and must be received. The Master indicates incidentally this feature of the Christian dispensation in His teaching during His ministry. He said upon a certain occasion, "Suffer the little children and forbid them not to come unto me, for of such is the (church) or the kingdom of God." Of such is the church. Of such the church consists. Of such the church is made up. The church has two departments. The one is on earth and the other is in heaven, the church militant and the church triumphant. Now we are to make the church on earth as much like heaven above as possible. This is only to be done by receiving the children into the church. Children are to be trained up, as you all know, in the nurture (i.e. in the nursery) of the church and in the admonition of the Lord."

I love the Evangelical Lutheran church because she loves children, and takes care of children, bringing them into the church. I wish to mention the fact that quite a number of learned men recently, who in their early ministry rejected infant membership in the church, were induced to reinvestigate this subject and to do it more carefully, and they are to-day rejoicing in a change of views upon this subject. I refer you to the Rev. Dr. Milich of Cincinnati, O. I also refer you to the Rev. Dr. Boardman of Brooklyn, N. Y., one of the ablest divines in the land, a personal friend of mine. I would refer you to the Rev. Dr. Dowling of Cleveland, O., who has recently written on the subject. I would also refer to the Rev. Dr. Boardman of Philadelphia, Pa., who had opposed infant membership for forty years in his ministry, and now says that he was mistaken, after having very carefully reconsidered the subject. Do you know that there is a great deal of evidence in favor of infant membership in profane history? We cannot set it aside. I recently read a book to which I suppose few of you have access. It gave an account of the introduction of the Gospel among the Franks, Huns and the Gauls. Infant baptism is incidentally referred to. Clovis was a bold ruler and married a Christian woman named Clotilda. They had a son, and that son was baptized by the request of the mother. But he died in infancy, this was in the third century. Another son was born to them. Clovis first opposed his wife Clotilda in the baptism of this child, because the first one died, but he finally yielded to her request. He was a fierce warrior, and he was waging war with neighboring tribes, because there was no regularly established empire, and the war seemed to have gone against him. His wife told him to pray to the Lord Jesus, the God of battles, and so, when the battle was turning against him, he prayed, "Lord Jesus, thou God of my wife Clotilda help me in this hour of need." And the battle turned in his favor. That convinced him that there was a reality in his wife's religion, and he sought Christian baptism, and 3,000 of his subjects, men, women and children, received Christian baptism. The hymn is given that they sang as they marched to the pool, or to the place where the water ran, and were sprinkled over the head, thus receiving Christian baptism. Do you know [illegible]

[illegible] pertinent manuscript that settles a number of questions once for all was discovered in an old library at Constantinople, probably four years ago. That says positively that children according to the custom of the Essenes, were baptized and also says that the Sabbath was changed as we now have it. Upon this point it is a very valuable document, and nobody doubts its genuineness. We have the undoubted testimony of a number of writers who lived during the first century, Justin Martyr, Irenæus, Turtullian, Origen, all [illegible] the fact that infant baptism existed in the church of Jesus Christ during the first century.

But I must hasten to close. In regard to the forms of worship in the Evangelical Lutheran church I have a few words to say. Whatever forms of worship any congregation may see proper to choose they have a right to choose it. Some [illegible] the extended liturgical form. Others use a shorter form such as we [illegible] and still others have no such form. All are Lutherans and all have equal rights. We allow each congregation to select the form of worship that [illegible] in accordance with the teachings of the Scriptures. In regard to the administration of the Lord's Supper she teaches also [illegible] rather she has [illegible] majority, use the standing posture [illegible] as it is the most convenient for the communicants. Others kneel at the altar and in that way observe this holy [illegible] Others are seated around the table, and thus way discharge this duty. [illegible] always has adopted the exact form that was used by the apostles.

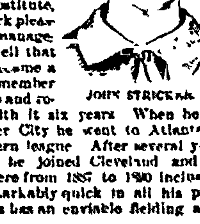

The polity of the Evangelical Lutheran church [illegible] First she holds that the outward organization should be modified to suit the peculiar times and places. Secondly our form of government is a modified form of Congregationalism. Each congregation is an independent body and legislates for itself. The government of each congregation is vested in a council elected by the members of the church. The council is elected for a term of years and not for life. Our synods and conferences are mainly advisory boards, and have no power to legislate for the church. They may advise, but only decide questions when asked to do so. The property acquired by the congregation belongs to each individual member of the church and the property is held for the church by trustees elected for that purpose by the church.

We admire the Lutheran church for her excellent literature. We claim for her that she has the best, and the greatest variety of literature of any church in the world. It is a remarkable fact that nearly all denominations use the literature furnished by the Lutheran church. The historical works, such as Mosheimus works, and the works of Neander are found in almost any theological seminary or college in the land. Then there are works on natural history by Cuvier and Humboldt, works on botany by Lenious, all used as text books in many of our institutions. In the range of theological science, she excels all others. Luther's numerous works, the learned Melancthon's writing are found almost in all theological seminaries and colleges. Frank's and Spanier's works have a place in many libraries. Knapp's Theology is used as a text book by almost all theological seminaries. Storr's and Flatt's and Store Koutz's works on Biblical theology have a place in many of our schools, as do also Krunbacher's works. Frelinghuyser's theology is a standard work, and for commentaries on the Bible there are Luther's, Lange's, Olshausen and Meyer's, and many others.

Finally, we remark that we love the Lutheran church because she is an aggressive church and a progressive church. Her increase has been wonderful. It is a marvel during the last decade. I take it from the census of the United States her increase has been 64.80 per cent., almost double that of any other Protestant denomination. She to-day is doing Christian work in the United States in from twelve to fourteen different languages. I love the Lutheran church because she gave back to the world then enshrouded in midnight darkness, the great principles which are the real foundation and life of Protestantism, and of religious and civil liberty. True Protestantism and religious and civil liberty must ever go hand in hand. They are inseparably connected. She also threw open the long-closed Bible, checked the tide of ignorance and corruption and rolled back the clouds of superstition and bigotry, and largely through her instrumentality a new age has been ushered in whose glory will increase as the ages roll on. I love the Lutheran church because she is active in benevolent work, by befriending the homeless and helpless by means of her asylums and sanitariums. I love the Lutheran church because she is building and supporting institutions of learning throughout the land. She is carrying the Gospel to the poor and the destitute. She is establishing all through this broad land churches for the benefit of those that are destitute. She is sending missionaries, and planting institutions of learning among the heathen that she may teach the grand principles of the Gospel, and thank God the church each year is becoming more and more active in her efforts to do the work of the Master. "Let us then walk about her, count her towers, and mark well her bulwarks, and consider her palaces that we may tell the pleasing story of her strength and her beauty to the generations that follow."

Second Baseman John Stricker.

Second Baseman Stricker, of the Boston American association team, is an old timer on the diamond, but for all that is only thirty-one years of age. He first professionally wielded the willow and endeavored to keep runners from stealing second with the Athletics, of Philadelphia, in 1883. He played as a substitute, but his work pleased the management so well that he soon became a regular member of the club and remained with it six years. When he left the Quaker City he went to Atlanta of the Southern league. After several years of service he joined Cleveland and remained there from 1887 to 1890 inclusive. He is remarkably quick in all his plays and always has an enviable fielding average.

The Social Turn Verein of Trenton is a flourishing society and is now erecting a handsome new hall at a cost of about $30,000. The Trenton society was organized by twenty men as far back as 1855. It now has a membership of about 300 of the most prominent German-Americans in the city.

The new clubhouse which is being erected on Broad street is three stories and is built of Egyptian brick. Three stores will occupy the ground floors and help pay the [illegible] expenses. The second floor will be given up to a ballroom, supper and cloakrooms, while on the third floor will be the assembly room and the officers' apartments. In the rear of the building a three story gymnasium containing all the modern appliances for athletic work will be erected.

Engineer Lowrie in the City

Mr H C Lowrie, ex city engineer of Denver, is in this city for several days looking over the sewer system as constructed in 1888 from plans proposed by him He is well pleased with the excellent working of the entire system.

Mr Lowrie is an expert in sanitary matters and his name has been prominently mentioned as a member of the Denver board of public works. Denver could not make a better selection for a position of this kind. Mr. Lowrie, however, declines to be interviewed upon the subject at this time.

Mrs. Bradford's Lecture.

Yesterday evening Mrs. Mary C. C Bradford gave her lecture on Personal Recollections of the Papal Court Under Pio Nono and Antonelli in The Antlers' pavilion. The Rev. Mr. Gregg introduced the speaker to the representative audience which greeted the lady.

The lecture was a most interesting one and abounded in vivid and terse descriptions of what met the eyes of the American visitors during their inspection of Pope Pio Nono's court, and of the personal appearance which pope and cardinal presented when the audience was given to the party of which Mrs. Bradford was a member.

At the opening of her lecture the speaker drew a comparison between Antonelli, ruling the Roman Catholic church in the name of Pio Nono, and Cardinal Richelieu, who ruled France in the name of Louis XIII. Each made an equally earnest and brilliant struggle, Richelieu met success, and Antonelli failure. The former had gone with the spirit of the time, and Antonelli, in his attempt to weaken what remained of the national character of the Roman church implanted in other countries, had gone against it, and had therefore lost what Richelieu had won.

The visit of the American party to the papal court was described at length in every detail: the picture which St. Peters and the Vatican garden presented on the Easter Sunday when the audience was given, the elaborate decorations of the court's interior, some of it worked by the hand of Raphael himself, and the pope and cardinal, handsomely attired, prepared to meet their visitors. During the audience the subject, then being considered, of removing the seat of papacy to America was considered, and the cardinal expressed the belief that during the lifetime of the youngest of his visitors that removal would take place.

The lecture from a literary point of view was one whose equal has not been heard in this city for a long time, and as far as interest is concerned was most successful, as it was a detailed account of one of the few Americans who have had the good fortune to visit the papal court at such a time and in such a way.

Mrs. Bradford will give a series of lectures during the autumn on the following topics: "The Tendency of Modern Literature," "The Tendency of Modern Art," "Comparative Theosophy," "Theosophy in General Literature."

McMahon's Circus.

McMahon's circus gave two very creditable performces in this city yesterday.

The tent was not as well filled as the show deserved, but the audience was an appreciative one, and the circus will probably be far more largely attended when it visits this city again.

The two trick elephants opened both afternoon and evening performance by exhibiting excellent training. The acrobats did well and there were among them one or two stars of a very high order. In the side show "Jo-Jo," the dog-faced man, created considerable interest, and the Albino, the Australian beauty, conversed in a friendly way with his inspectors, and made it plain that he was genuine in every particular.

GET READY FOR THE BOOM.
All the old citizens predict that the boom is sure to come, and that it will come early in Winter. The big money in real estate is always made in platting additions but in this city nearly all the available acreage is taken. We have two pieces of the finest acreage in the city, both in growing localities, one on Boulder street, the other joining Hillside Addition, and we will sell them at bed-rock prices to cash buyers. If we cannot satisfy you that there is fifty per cent. profit in either of them we will not ask you to buy. They are snaps and if you have money and mean business it will pay you to see the ground.
